BACKGROUNDS!

This course is designed to help multilingual graduate students develop conversational fluency in English as an International Language and provides opportunities to build conversational fluency in intercultural contexts by applying various resources for communication.

The main focus of the course will be on helping students to apply knowledge of pronunciation, linguistic features, and communicative skills during conversational exchange in a variety of social, academic, and professional contexts. The course will include discussions about the cultural values, norms, and patterns that shape the way people communicate in their day-to-day conversations.
